OUR STATES | INTRODUCTION

[+] What is a “Pago”

The word pago comes from Latin pagus and, according to the Royal Academy of the Spanish Language, means a specific district of land or country property, particularly vineyards and olive groves. In other words, it is a site with soil and microclimate characteristics differentiating it from others, notoriously linked to vineyards and olive groves from which wines and oils are obtained with singular features and qualities. Its area should be limited to maintain the high quality of its products. A true pago should have its own winery or oil mill, where their products from the grapes and olives grown on the property are exclusively prepared and bottled.

Under the direction of our winemaker Julio Mourelle, graduated in viticulture and oenology at California University (Davis), we prepare our wines in two ‘pagos’ with very different soils. We uphold a culture and preparation philosophy based on sustainability and respect for our natural and architectural environment, likewise innovation and the use of advanced technologies, i.e. a synthesis of progress and tradition. Intervening in this process are: our technical director Julio Mourelle and consultants Michel Rolland (oenology), Richard Smart (canopy management), and Claude Bourguignon (terroir management).

Sustainability and respect for the natural and cultural environment.
